

In my opinion this system is a very bad idea for consumers. This protection can only be 100% secure for a brief time. When this protection is broken, what will consumers have to do? Buy another piece of hardware with updated copy protection? I've already bought a HDTV and if it is made obsolete in any way by this system I shall be very upset. I think this move is a very bad idea for the HDTV market.